Patterns and Scenarios in Political Law

*A talk by Dr. Gregory Tardi,
Senior Parliamentary Counsel at the House of Commons in Ottawa*

The relationship of law and politics is one of the foundations of democratic rule of law. There is much commentary about individual instances in which government or states are alleged to be in breach of the rule of law. However, there is little effort at understanding the general patterns of behaviour of governments and states in this regard. In his talk, Dr. Tardi will examine such patterns in an effort to help us better understand current public life.

Gregory Tardi, B.A. (Hons.), B.C.L., LL.B., DJur., is Senior Parliamentary Counsel in the Office of the Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel of the House of Commons in Ottawa. He is the author of two (soon to be three) books on political law and Executive Director of the Institute of Parliamentary and Political Law. Mr. Tardi's comments reflect his personal views as a scholar and are not mandated by his employer.

This event is co-sponsored by the Department of Political Science
